The bottoms of all manure pits, if large quantities of manure are to be accumulated, should be well covered with cut straw, leaves, earth or any other absorbent material. Manual Training.

New York World.

The aivocates of the memory cramming system of public school education object to the introduction of manual training because the schools and the teachers "are aiready overladen with all sorts of demands."

Very true. But the remedy for this is to unload some of the uselees teaching and substitute something useful. Hidl of the present course in geography, two-thirds of the arithmetical puzzles, a large share of the technicalities of gramma and pretty much all of the smattering of the ornamental branches of learning which has been imposed on the baal curriculum of our common schools might be spared, to the decided advantage of both teachers and pupils.

The experience in schools where instruction in drawing, modeling and the use of tools and machinery is carried on in connection with the common English branches—as it was in the School of Mechanic Arts in Boston—proves that the boys study with greater zees and including news a more natural, symmetrical and practical training.

Statistics are cited from the high school at Eric, P.A., to show that eighty-saven per cont of the boy graduates for the past twenty-two years are engaged in mutual or industrial occupations. This may prove that the boys study with greater sees and including the more matural, symmetrical and practical training.

And drive look the loo that you fear.
With the wespon that never will fall you.

for when you suffer from any of the weaknesses, "irregularities," and "functional derangements," peculiar to yoursex, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription you can put the enemy of ill-health and happiness to rout. Although the question has been discussed since the time Sir Humphrey Davy made his experiments in that direction, yet scientists are divided on the question of the appropriation by plants of free nitrogen frem the atmosphere. When some process is discovered by which the nitrogen of the air can be utilized as a fertilizer—which is not improbable—the cost of production will be very low, and all nitrogenous plants made to produce enormous crops.

Cut straw as bedding for sheep keeps the dirt out of the wool, and alfords a dry place for the sheep at night. The shed in which sheep remain at night should be frequently cleaned in order to avoid accumulation of droppings. As the fall rains approach, and the weather remains damp, sheep easily take cold, whilch is accompanied with discharges at the nostrie. Dry shelter and bedding will greatly assist in warding off this difficulty.

The bronze is the largest breed of turkey, and gobblors three years old have been known to weigh fifty pounds before being killed and dressed for market. It is not a very hardy breed, but does well when crossed on the common variety. The White Holland turkey is smaller than the bronze, but it is a morantive forager, and can secure nearly all of its food.
